For each question below, describe how your company's programs, policies and practices drive opportunity for all. Highlight the unique factors and benefits that make your organization more appealing to prospective and current team members. Answers need not to be limited to word count.

1. What products or services does your company produce?
2. How long has your company been in business?
3. What specific diversity, equity and inclusion initiatives has your company undertaken? Please include documentation from company handbooks or policy manuals.
4. Does your company offer training for current managers to ensure they are employing inclusionary hiring practices, and are they held accountable for doing so?
5. Explain how your diversity programs have evolved over time?
6. Please detail the success of your diversity programs? Include statistics supporting an increase in hiring or promotions of those in under represented communities in your response.
7. How do you measure the success of your diversity, equity and inclusion initiatives?
8. Specifically when it comes to people of color, members of the LGBTQ community, veterans, the disabled, and members of other social identity groups, what specific steps have you taken to encourage applicants from these communities to seek employment with your company?
9. What steps are you taking to ensure representation of under represented groups in management and board-level positions?
10. Do you have any initiatives to give back to underprovided communities? What about other minority groups?
11. Are there other initiatives your organization supports to help equip people in disadvantaged communities to better compete for tech-related careers?
12. What specific plans are in place at your organization to help you become even more diverse in the future?
